

Warren Institute - Education Director Job Announcement

JOB ANNOUNCEMENT

Director of Education Policy

The Chief Justice Earl Warren Institute on Race Ethnicity and Diversity (Warren Institute) at UC Berkeley School of Law is seeking a Director of Education Policy. The Warren Institute is a multidisciplinary, collaborative venture to produce research, research-based policy prescriptions and curricular innovation on issues of racial and ethnic justice in California and the nation. Its mission is to engage the most difficult topics related to civil rights, race and ethnicity in a wide range of legal and public policy subject areas and provide valuable intellectual capital to public and private sector leaders, the media and the general public, while advancing scholarly understanding.

The Director of Education Policy will work with the legal, research and policy staff of the Warren Institute to develop a research-based policy agenda for K-12 and post secondary education reform. Responsibilities include: conducting qualitative and quantitative research and policy analysis, and providing policymakers and civil rights leaders with research-based policy recommendations focused on the racial and ethnic justice dimensions of various school improvement measures; developing the education research and policy portfolio for the Warren Institute; and conducting original research and policy analysis for internal and external constituencies. This position will also supervise and manage activities of the education staff and assist with multiple fundraising efforts.
