

8/1/07 From Prof. Gail Silverstein:

Jo Hoenninger, of HoenningerLaw, a litigation/advocacy/negotiation firm in San Francisco, says:

I am looking for a bright, energetic, committed person to work in my office 10 to 15 hours per week keeping case files up to date, calendaring case activity, filling out judicial counsel forms, handling case filings with the courts, and fielding calls from clients. This is a great opportunity for a law student to get his or her feet wet in a interesting litigation practice that includes everything from general business litigation to cutting edge LGBT civil rights litigation. Pay is $10 to $15 per hour.

Thanks so much for circulating this with the LGBT student groups at the law schools.
